King County Metro Jobs Access Employer Transportation Programs

Attracting and maintaining a vital workforce is important for a successful employer. Metro is working with area employers to provide transportation services for low-income and welfare populations entering the workforce.

Metro can help you solve transportation challenges facing these employees through the Jobs Access Program. Metro is interested in innovative partnership arrangements with employers to address barriers that regular public transportation will not.

Metro Programs and Jobs Access Transportation solutions that may benefit your employees and your worksite include:

- Jobs Access Employer Van - Metro will lease you a van for $300 a month to provide your employees with transportation for commuting, shift work, childcare and training if the van includes workers from low-income backgrounds. Better yet, Metro will pay for 50% of the lease and expenses such as fuel and maintenance.

- Job Access Funding Partnership - You may own your own vehicle or lease a vehicle from another agency. If that vehicle is used to transport people from low-income backgrounds to jobs, training for your employment site, Metro will reimburse you 50% of the costs.
- Explore Vanpooling and Carpooling - If you want to explore vanpooling or carpooling potential at your site for low-income or low-wage employees, Metro Job Access will pay for 50% of the cost of your use of RideShare-Plus. (Need line describing the Rideshare Plus.
- VanShare Program - Do your employees need a vehicle for shift work or to get to your office park? Try the VanShare Program. Metro leases vans to be stationed at a transit center, park-and-ride or ferry terminal for use by employees to commute the last few mile after their bus commutes. The cost: $50 per month per van and fuel. Jobs Access will reimburse
